My paintings and prints draw inspiration from the unique landscape and nature of the west coast of Scotland, in particular the theme of movement and change in activity within the environment of Loch Linnhe. This is often revealed in the birdlife of the bay. My imagery draws very largely on the cumulative experience of looking and the memory of the observed moment.

Jessica launched Crùbag with a dream to embrace her love for the oceans, marine science and the arts. The vision is to communicate the importance and beauty of research and the oceans through textile design with comprehensive science outreach. Using software, digital photography, microscopy imaging, manual and digital illustrations, and artistic interpretations, a visually striking textile collection emerges, with bold representations, repetition patterns, textures, abstracts and depictions of subject.

Ewen's passion for photography began whilst studying woven textile design in the early 80s. His enthusiasm for creating images has developed from a close interest in the unique Lorn light, colour and reflections alongside textures of waterside rust and decay. Since moving to awesome Argyll in 2004, a growing interest in digital photography as a creative tool has enabled Ewen to discover new possibilities for his inspired photographic imagery.

David uses the natural form of wood in everyday objects, using native woods that are mainly windfall or removed due to disease or for safety reasons. He takes on commissions and develops bespoke works as well as progressing his own ideas, he also teaches woodturning. His work bridges a craft to an artform by using the natural beauty of wood which is enhanced by colour, texture, and/or piercing.

From her studio overlooking the Corryvreckan, Macdonald looks across the Sound of Jura; to Scarba, the mountains of Mull before the great expanse of the North Atlantic. Macdonald's painting is based on her intimate understanding of the landscape around her. Her knowledge of sailing informs her of approaching weather patterns, and she captures fleeting Hebridean sunshine alongside the winter squalls with equal immediacy.

Although a landscape painter Ross's main inspiration is the human presence in nature. He feels the history of places acutely, and his series from the Auschwitz Birkenau woods explore the beauty in one of man's darkest places. His sketches from Berlin with accompanying diary entries offer insight into an artist who thrives on chance, fleeting moments and often an element of danger.

I grew up in Orkney. Studied History of Art at Aberdeen University, then needing some fresh air, spent several years doing archaeological field work
on mainland Scotland, Shetland and the Hebrides, before returning to Orkney in 1994 and beginning to paint.
Lemony clouds in porcelain skies,
pale grasses against leaden hills,
fresh greens of early summer, roaring luminous surf at dusk in winter, and mackerel, keep me reaching for my brushes.

I paint out-of-doors as much as possible, to capture the excitement of an encounter with a wild animal, bird or place. In the studio I use screenprinting, and will demonstrate this technique during Open Studio Weekend. Recently I was elected associate of the Society of Wildlife Artists.

Sea-pinks on the shore, white sandy beaches, glorious sunsets. Originally from the east coast, I am constantly inspired by the dramatic colours of the rugged landscape and seascape of the west and try to convey to the viewer the calmness of an island bay, the drama of a crashing wave on a deserted beach or the splendour of a west coast sunset.

Working in watercolour I am drawn to the shore. From home I follow otters along sheltered sea lochs, scramble over rocky tidelines and trail deer through the stillness of the wood. Days later, the oily silver colour of reflected sky on a wet coat, the breaking sea patterns of mirrored land, might have led to a painting, or not. Visit my studio and gallery to see how it's going.
